At Tuesday's Meeting... Nalco & Valero water-use

Nick Chkouras spoke today about how Nalco is helping Valero to save water. Starting with the basics, he patiently explained about what a boiler is and how it works. Steam is used for heating and rotating turbines, but the heat causes evaporation: more water is added mid-cycle, and the end result being that the concentration of minerals increases. Boilers can tolerate mineral rates to a set limit before scale forms. Scale within the tube can cause corrosion under each deposit. Nalco's water saving innovation automated the process to control boiler blowdown operations, resulting in a decrease of water usage. The project has exceeded the original water savings expectations and is saving 108.7 gallons per minute or 57,132,720 gallons per year. Cost for the system was about $1 million and savings for Valero is about $1 million / year. Result: Lots of water savings!!!

Meeting notes

Collected a lot of money for Thanksgiving dinners but there is still a need for more donations. $60 per dinner and we want to help 14 families.
